FOREWORD.

A work of this nature must necessarily be imperfect, especially when we remember that our ancestors, when leaving Europe, seemed anxious to destroy every link that bound them to the land of their nativity. But after almost a year of painstaking research, during which the author has written more than 500 letters and cards of inquiry, more than half of which are yet unanswered, it is a source of congratulation that results are as good as they are, and that this work will be treasured by all who appreciate knowing who we are and whence we came. It is to be hoped that a later edition may give in full the lines which we have failed to secure.

Among sources of help the author acknowledges his indebtedness to "History of the Scottish Persecution," "The History of Ireland," "Early English Jurisprudence," "Colonization of Ulster," "The Orangemen," Munsell's Shepherd's Genealogy; Thomas Shepherd, of Drumbroghas, Drumosladdy, Ireland; the Keeper of Public Records, Dublin; the Episcopal Rector of Parish of Drumlane, County Caven; the Rector of County Cork; George W. Shepherd, of New Martinsville, W. Va. (of another line); Mrs. Allen, of Pittsburg, Pa., of the same line; John Shepherd, of Middlebourn, W. Va.; S. F. Shepherd, or Scio, O.; Jane Shepherd, of Carrollton, O.; Maud Cullum, of Beloit, Kas., and others, besides the members of the committee who have been untiring in their work.

The 100th anniversary of the landing of James and Sarah Shepherd will be held as near that place as convenient August 15th, 1912, at which time we hope to meet those who have a common ancestry in happy fellowship.

Those who plan to be present from a distance should notify one of the following Committee on Arrangements, who will also be able to furnish a limited number of these books at cost to cover expense: Miss Ida Dobbs, 10708 Churchill Ave., Cleveland, O.; Wm. M. Shepherd, Carrollton, O.; Samuel D. Shepherd, Freeport, O.; James T. Shepherd, Amsterdam, O.; Mrs. Lucy Wilson, Hammondsville, O., R. D. 2.

Imperfections must be overlooked. The author is a busy pastor, who keeps no stenographer, proofreader or amanuensis, and whose work has all been done without thought of remuneration, but through a love of the work. He already feels remunerated by the large circle of friends, whom he is sure it will be a blessing to know, and with whom the preparation of this work has brought him into touch. May the God our fathers served bless and enrich all those whose names appear here.

JOHN F. SHEPHERD.

CHARACTERISTICS.

We may be pardoned if we call attention to some of the characteristics of the descendants of James and Sarah Morton Shepherd which a perusal of these pages will reveal. This is not boasting, but a simple statement of facts.

And first, the family is religious, that type of religion known as Orthodox Christianity. The vagaries of Occultism, in the form of Christian Science, Spiritism or Theosophy, or Unitarianism, despoiling Christ of His Deity, has no part in their thought, as they retain the sublime faith of their Covenanters ancestors. Catholicism is also unknown. Their religious life finds expression in such aggressive religious bodies as the Presbyterian, the Methodist, the United Brethren and kindred churches.

This faith has expressed itself in their lives. Christ does not dress up a moral picture and ask us to observe its beauty, but tells us how to live, and the most beautiful characters the world has ever seen are those who received and lived his precepts without once conceiving their beauty. This is seen in the home life of the family. Many of these have homes which so face toward the Father's House that an angel might be asked to stay over night and not find himself out of his element. Domestic infelicity is rare, and, in this day of easy and numerous divorces, separations are almost unknown here.

Bishop Hall has said: "An idle man is he Devil's cushion." If all other clans furnished the kind of stuff of which the Shepherds are made, the Devil would have to sit upon the soft side of a rail or stand up. Parasites, who engage in a business which appeals to human depravity for gain, without ministering to human need or rendering a Divine-human service, are unknown. The occupation of farming, always honorable, but recognized more so today than ever, predominates. Several are, or have been, merchants in legitimate lines of trade. A host are teachers of schools and of music and art, some having distinguished themselves in this line. The learned professions, law, medicine and the ministry, have their share. In all lines of effort, integrity and honor have characterized the family. Though a hundred crooked paths may conduct to a temporary success, the one plain and straight path of public and private virtue which leads to a pure and lasting fame, and to the blessings of posterity, has been chosen.

"The greatest truths are the simplest,
And so are the greatest men."

"What's in a name?" Far back among the Anglo-Norman settlers of the British Isles, the prefix "Mack," abbreviated "Mc," and the Irish "O" were used for "son"; thus McDonald or O'Donald is the son of Donald. So in the Northern countries, the designation was at the end of the name, and it became Donaldson, or, if of Finnish or Swedish origin, it was Donaldsen. As early as the tenth century the occupation gave names to the clan, but it remained for Edward the Fourth of England, in 1465, to secure the enactment of a statute to that effect. By this statute surnames were adopted of a town in which they lived, as Sutton, Chester, Trion, or of a color, as White, Black or Brown, or of office, as Cook, Butler, or profession or occupation, as Smith, Carpenter, Turner, Shepherd.

This method of obtaining surnames seems to have spread over Europe, as a study of German, Italian and French names will indicate. For example, Taylor in English is Schneider in German and Sartos (the surname of the present Pope Pius X) in Italian. So Shepherd in English is Shaffer in German.

The Shepherds originally dwelt in Scotland, where, as the name indicates, they were farmers and keepers of flocks, as was the great King of Israel at Bethlehem. Scotland, since the time of John Knox, through persecution and blood, has held fast to the Bible. Even three hundred years ago, every family had a Bible and every village a school. That olden day is beautifully described in Burns' "Cotter's Saturday Night," when, after describing the family worship, led by "The priest like father," in which all the family join, after he reads from "the big ha' Bible, ance his father's pride," Burns writes:

"From scenes like these old Scotia's grandeur springs,
That makes her loved at home, revered abroad;
Princes and lords are but the breath of kings;
An honest man's the noblest work of God."

Such training and such faith, in that day of long ago, prepared our ancestors for the fiery trial which was to try them. Persecution, like death, removes lies and leaves only truth to cling to. Suffering for truth develops character, hence Scottish descendants go straight to the mark like an arrow, and are not eaten up with doubts and difficulties.

In the 16th century Queen Elizabeth threw open to colonization by English and Scotch settlers the Province of Ulster in North Ireland, but in 1566 the Scots were driven out of Ulster by Shane O'Neill. They slowly returned and were evangelized by Robert Blaire, the famous Scotch evangelist. Again, in 1641, the Catholics attempted to massacre the whole of the Province and drove most of them from their homes.

Then, a few years later, came the shocking persecutions for the truth in Scotland under John Graham (Lord Claverhouse). The Godly James Guthrie was the first to suffer death in 1661. Four hundred faithful ministers of the Word were ejected from their pulpits, and their flocks were scattered and were hunted in mountain caves and in glens, and were hurried to prison and to death. The climax was reached at the "killing time at the cross of Edinburgh," July 27, 1681, when the saintly Cameron, Cargil and others were executed, Cargil singing the 118th Psalm on the scaffold.

During this bloody regime many flocked to the Province of Ulster, which was now quiet again, others fled to Holland, and from there to England or America. It was at this time, possibly about 1680, that three brothers, said to be John, James and Thomas Shepherd, settled in Ulster, County Cavan, Ireland, just in time to take part in the Battle of the Boyne, which in July, 1690, destroyed the power of the persecutors and settled the Godly William and Mary over Great Britain. In this Battle of the Boyne and in the glories of Londonderry and Enniskillen, glories which will live as long as the English language endures, our ancestors had part.

Of that sad separation in Scotland, when the bloody Claverhouse held sway, we may not speak. As these three brothers, with their wives and possibly a few "bairns," started for Ireland, and for a province where but forty years before cruel massacres had obtained, others of their family preferring to risk England or Holland, parted from them with tearful eyes, no more to meet until the streams of lineage might blend in the New World, where, please God, religious persecution can never come.

Of this latter company, who came by the way of England to America, we have only a few words. We know that there were, some fifty years later, or about 1730, three brothers who reached America. One, whose name is not remembered, settled near Annapolis, another, Thomas, near Richmond, Va., and William, who finally settled in what was afterward known as West Virginia, on Wheeling Creek. Thomas Shepherd laid out Shepherdstown, Va., formerly known as Mechlenberg, and built a church. His son, Col. David Shepherd, who in 1780 was sent out with Col. Broadhead against the Indians, strenuously objected to attacking the Moravians in the Muskingum and Tuscarawas valleys, and succeeded in preventing that which Col. Williamson did in 1782 at Gnaddenhutton. He had a large part in building the great National Pike, extending from Cumberland, Md., to St. Louis. The defense of Shepherd Fort, near Wheeling, by him and his contemporaries, was the occasion of many thrilling feats. His son, Col. Moses Shepherd, honored throughout the nation, and four brothers, grandsons of William, who served in the war for the preservation of the Union, will help to keep the name of this illustrious line alive. Col. Moses Shepherd's grave is marked by a splendid monument in the cemetery of the Old Stone Elm Ridge Presbyterian Church, on Wheeling Creek, where many friends sleep near the church built by their great-uncle and grandfather. These have spread throughout Ohio and to the west. Descendants are living in Pittsburgh, whom to know is a blessing. The general characteristics, the persistence of names, such as James, John, Thomas and William, the devotion to truth and the spirit of honor and religion, mark these lines as descended from the same head in far-off Scotland.

Sir Walter Raleigh discovered the potato in South America, and introduced it into Ireland in 1610, and in a short time it became the staple crop of the country, so that one family could raise enough food for forty families. But if the potato failed, as sometimes it did, dread famine followed. Though the Church of England represented but one-twelfth of the population of Ireland, it absolutely controlled the affairs of the country. This, and the burdens of absent landlordism, made the times, especially when the potatoes failed, intolerable. Scotch Presbyterians who defended Londonderry were treated no better by these landlords than the Catholics who besieged it. These absent landlords often turned out Protestant yeomen to get a higher rent from Catholic cotters; they were forced to labor on the roads, which was often a private job. These exactions sent men to America, hating England and the Catholics alike. The Protestants of Ulster had been driven out twice in fifty years, and it was not to be wondered at that the outrages of 1798, when again the Protestants and Catholics came into bloody conflict, and the atrocities of the Scullabogue barn are recalled, that we find the stalwart young men, William and Peter Shepherd, joining the Orangemen and striking hard blows for the right. Nor is it to be wondered at that so soon thereafter as enough could be gotten together to make possible the voyage they should seek a home in the land of peace and plenty.

I have spoken of the faith of long ago in Scotland, and of the persistence of certain names in all lines. These, it should be observed, are Bible names—James, John, Peter, Moses and Thomas. Later, after William of Orange had given rest to the land, William became a favorite name in the family. The name George seems not to be used on the other side, but only on this side the ocean. Evidently the kings of England of that name were not much loved by their Irish or English subjects, but George Washington has appealed to Americans. The Parish of Drumlane, County Cavan, is Episcopal. The Keeper of Public Records of Ireland in Dublin tells me that the records of that Parish, which are kept in his office, begin with 1796, and that from that date to 1812, when the family had left Ireland, the following records appear: "Baptism of Frances, 1802, and William, 1806, children of James and Mary Shepherd; Marriage of John Shepherd, 1802, and of Eleanor Shepherd (Note this name later) in 1803." Evidently our ancestors, while living in this parish, did not belong to the Church of England. Thomas Shepherd, a farmer of Drumbrohas, Drumcladdy, Parish of Drumlane, gives the name of his father as William, whose brothers were Peter and Thomas, and his grandfather as James. His grandfather had a distant relative and friend, Gabriel Shepherd, evidently James Shepherd's son by a former marriage (See James and Sarah Shepherd). These family names persist in Ireland and America.

James Shepherd was born in Parish of Drumlane, County Cavan, Ireland, 1730, and died in Jefferson County, Ohio, in June, 1814, aged 84 years. He was a son of William and grandson of James, one of the three brothers who came to the Province of Ulster from Scotland about 1680, or fifty years before his birth. He was married before and was the father of a son, Gabriel, and a daughter, who remained in Ireland. Some time after the death of his first wife, he married Sarah Morton about 1774, by whom the following children were born: Nancy, married to Charles Dobbs; William, Peter, James, John and Thomas. Early in 1812, when he was 82 years old, he started for America with his wife and two sons, John and Thomas. Because Great Britain needed John in the war with America, he was not permitted to continue, but Thomas was allowed to accompany his aged father and his mother. Enroute a storm arose upon the ocean, and they were compelled to cast much of their household goods overboard, packed in which was their family Bible, which contained the family records. This accounts for the lack of definite dates in the matter of births and marriages. What must have been the feelings of an old man, who was only to survive in the new world two years, on leaving the land of his fathers and of his life's activities?

Sarah Morton was born 1757 and was married to James Shepherd at the early age of 17 years, while her husband was 44. She survived him eight years, dying in 1822, tenderly cared for in the home of her son, Thomas. They sleep in the Montgomery cemetery in Jefferson County, Ohio, a marble shaft marking their last resting place, while the faith of their lives is voiced in the inscription carved deeply, "And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord. Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow them." The faith and simplicity of Sarah Shepherd is shown in the will which she dictated, by which she disposed of her few earthly effects. It reads as follows:

"In the name of God Amen. I Sarah Shepherd, of Ross Township, in the County of Jefferson and State of Ohio, being weak of body but of sound mind and memory, blessed be God for the same, do make and publish this, my last will and testament in the manner and form following, viz.:

First—I give and bequeath my immortal soul into the hand of Almighty God who gave it to me, and my body to the earth, to be buried in a decent and Christian like manner, at the discretion of my executors to be here named. And as to what worldly property, it hath pleased the Lord to bless me with. I give to my daughter, Nancy, one dollar; I do give and bequeath to my son, Peter Shepherd, one dollar; I give and bequeath to my son, William Shepherd, the sum of one dollar. I give and bequeath to my son, Peter Shepherd, one dollar; I give and bequeath to my son James Shepherd, the sum of one dollar; I give and bequeath to my son, John Shepherd, the sum of one dollar; and, lastly, as to all the residue and remainder of my personal estate, goods and chattels, I give and bequeath the same to my son, Thomas Shepherd; and I do appoint Thomas Shepherd my whole and sole executor of this, my last will and testament and revoking all former wills by me made. In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 27th day of May,

The goods and chattels of the deceased were inventoried and appraised by Arthur Latimer, James McComish and Joseph Shepherd a nephew of James Shepherd.

Nancy Shepherd, eldest child and only daughter of James and Sarah Morton Shepherd, was born about the year 1775 in County Cavan, Ireland, Parish of Drumlane. About the year 1800 Ainger Dobbs of County Donegal, Ireland, with his wife and eight sons, removed to America. Charles, the third son, brought with him his new bride, Nancy Shepherd Dobbs, she being the first of her father's family to reach the New World. They settled in Beaver County, Pa., near his father's home, but later purchased land near to her brother's, John Shepherd, where they lived for twenty years or more, selling the farm about 1836 to her brother, John Shepherd. Charles Dobbs died 1851 and Nancy Shepherd Dobbs 1865, aged about 90 years. To them were born Ainger Dobbs, 1803; John Dobbs, 1807; James Dobbs, 1809; William Dobbs, 1812; Sarah Dobbs, 1814; Jane Dobbs, 1816; Gabriel Dobbs, 1818, and Ellen Dobbs, 1820.

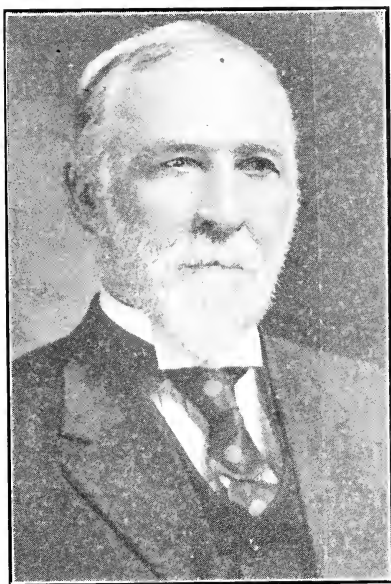

Ainger Dobbs, eldest son of Charles and Nancy Shepherd Dobbs, married Hannah Davis 1834 and died February, 1845. They had four sons, Matthew Champlain Dobbs, William Davis Dobbs, John Gormly Dobbs and James Bradford Dobbs.

Matthew Champlain Dobbs was born October 14, 1837, married Sarah Frank September 9, 1858, and died October 11, 1864.

James Bradford Dobbs, youngest son, was born February 22, 1844, and died August 15, 1859.

William Davis Dobbs, second son, was born August 31, 1839, married to Mary Sink July 4, 1867. He is a successful farmer and influential for good, living near Terre Haute, Ind. To them were born seven children, Charles B. Dobbs, the eldest, dying in infancy; Harry C. Dobbs, second son, born June 2, 1870, died October 7, 1894; Elmer, the fourth; Grace, only daughter; Guy A., fifth son, and John S., sixth son, all deceased.

Spencer L. Dobbs, third son of William Davis Dobbs and wife, born September 7, 1871, married Ora French. They have one daughter, Mary Rebecca Dobbs, born June 17, 1908.

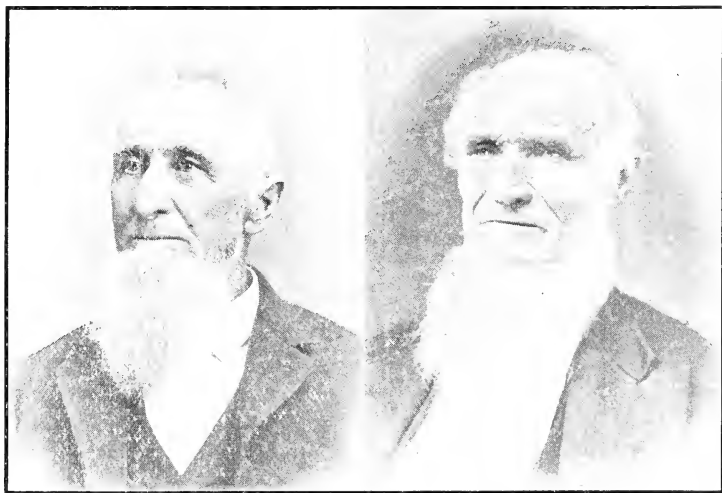

John Gormley Dobbs.

John Gormly Dobbs, third son of Ainger and Hannah Davis Dobbs, was born March 10, 1841; married Sarah Scott Bell June 1, 1870. After serving in the war for the preservation of the Union, he settled in Indiana and engaged first in the grocery business in Terre Haute. Later he turned his attention to the furniture business, in which he has built up a large trade. He and his family are devout Christians and members of the Baptist church. There were born to John G. and Sarah Dobbs two children. Clair Donaldson Dobbs, the son, was born May 26, 1871; married to Nellie Turk September 25 1901. She died December 2, 1903. Clair is assuming the charge of his father's business. The daughter, Effie Frances Dobbs, was born June 21, 1875. She graduated from the Terre Haute High School and from the Indiana State Normal, then taught for several years, finally becoming assistant supervisor of drawing in the city schools. After her mother's death in 1902 she gave up teaching and became a real home-keeper, where her artistic powers are wisely displayed in pushing the shadows that have come over the home life by the loss of the mother into the background, giving the picture the sunny tints of hope and faith. A few years ago she visited her ancestral home in Ireland.

John Dobbs second son of Charles and Nancy Shepherd Dobbs, born 1807, married to Mary Jane Arbuckle 1828, and died in Jefferson County, Ohio, Island Creek, 1890, aged 83. He was a successful farmer, industrious, honorable and above all a devout Christian. He was a member of the Methodist church for 58 years, having united with the Bray's Chapel in 1832. In life he was respected by all, and in death crowned by his Lord, whom he had served so faithfully. In his faith was mingled energy, skill, determination and cheerfulness.

William Dobbs.

John Dobbs.

One of his chief joys was to gather the little ones about him in the evening when his work for the day was done, and instruct and amuse them with stories. His grandchildren loved him, for he was never known to quarrel with anyone. His granddaughter, Mrs. Emma McMinn, who seems to have been a favorite with him, recalls his great efficiency in the realm of agriculture, his absolute truthfulness and sincerity and his marvelous poise as a true gentleman. The children of John and Mary J. Dobbs were: Ainger, born 1829, died in infancy; William, born 1830, died 1895; Sarah, born 1833; Charlotte, born 1835, died 1877; Mary, born 1837; George, born 1840, died 1864; Lucinda born 1842; one not named; John, born 1845; Robert, born 1848, died 1874; Alexander, born 1850; Jane, born 1853, died 1854.

Wm. Dobbs, eldest son of John and Mary Dobbs was born March 5, 1830 and died July 27, 1895. He married Eleanor J. Taylor in 1854 who died in 1858, leaving him a little daughter, Mary J. Dobbs, born 1857, died 1881. William Dobbs married Letitia F. McCort in 1860, who still survives, living with her children in Cleveland, Ohio. Of this union were born four children, James Wesley; Cora Mabel; Minnie Rozelle and Ida Blanche. William Dobbs was a prosperous farmer near Carrollton, Ohio. He was a devout Christian and member of the Methodist church and had the joy of seeing all his children converted and in the fellowship of the church before his death. His home was a shelter for the wayfarer and his generosity was bounded only by his ability to minister. Of him the physician who attended him in his last illness said: "I would rather die, having lived such a life as he did, than to be president of the United States." His friends were numerous and devoted because of his genuineness and loyalty to right. Of the children of William and Letitia Dobbs, James Wesley, born 1861, died 1867; Cora Mabel, born 1864, married Howard S. Hough April 1900. They have no children, live at 10708 Churchill Ave., Cleveland, Ohio. Minnie Rozelle Dobbs, born 1868, married Robert N. Moffat 1906. They have no children, live at Lamar, Colo. Ida Blanche Dobbs, born 1870, lives with her mother and sister at 10708 Churchill, Cleveland, Ohio. She is a book keeper, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and earnestly devoted to missionary interests, supporting a "Bible Woman" in China.

Sarah Dobbs, daughter of John and Mary Dobbs, born March 1833, married John Howe 1855, died February 25, 1910. In 1860 they with two small children moved to Missouri where they reared a large family. Her children are Emma Jane of New Rockford, N. D.; Angeline of Waverly; Rose of Osage, Mo.; Thomas of Rolliette, N. D.; Chaplin of Denver, Ia.; G. W. Howe of Fargo, N. D.; Olive, living near Shell Rock, Mo., and W. J. Howe, residing on the home farm near Shell Rock, Mo.

Charlotte Dobbs, second daughter of John and Mary Dobbs, was born 1835, married to John George, a Union soldier and Aid de camp to Gen. Grant in 1862. (Mr. George is still living in Steubenville, O.) Of this union were born four children, Cora, Emma, Mary and Robert. Charlotte Dobbs George died August 14, 1876.

Cora George, born January 23, 1866, married Charles Gretzinger 1885 with whom she lives in Bridgeport, Ohio, having about them a happy family of nine children as follows: Frank Gretzinger, George Gretzinger, Emma Gretzinger, Charles Gretzinger, Lillian Gretzinger, Charlotte Gretzinger, Frederick Gretzinger, James Gretzinger and Marian Gretzinger.

Clara Pyles was married to John F. Wyatt June 1882. They with their children reside in Steubenville, Ohio. Their children are Norman Wyatt, born 1883, married to Grace Conn, 1909. In early life she united with the Methodist Episcopal church, and was known as a power for good, wonderfully able in prayer, thoroughly conversant with the Word, having committed nearly the entire New Testament to memory, and loved by all who knew her. She had no children. She sleeps in the Kilgore cemetery. Her memorial contains these words as appropriate to her life:

“Religion filled her soul with peace, upon a dying bed;

Let faith look up, let sorrow cease, she lives with Christ instead.”

James Dobbs, third son and fifth child of Charles and Nancy Shepherd Dobbs lived and died in Pennsylvania.

Gabriel Dobbs, fourth son and sixth child of Charles and Nancy Shepherd Dobbs also lived and died in Pennsylvania. He was married and had one son and four daughters: James Wesley Dobbs, residing at Wilmington, Pa.; Nancy Dobbs, married to — Hazen; Sadie, married to — Boots; Jennie, also married and Adaline deceased.

Ellen Dobbs, youngest child of Charles and Nancy Shepherd Dobbs, born about 1825, married John Shepherd (“Sailor John”) to whom were born three sons and a daughter, Nancy Shepherd. The oldest child, Arthur and the mother died shortly after the birth of the fourth child. The father with the three remaining little ones went west.

William Shepherd, oldest son of James and Sarah Shepherd, was born in County Cavan, Ireland in the year 1778. May we not pause to note the fact that in that year Ireland was granted Home Rule, which lasted for twenty years, or until Pitt saw the wretched results of such an effort. Almost immediately there sprang up secret organizations among the Catholics and Protestants, for the purpose of controlling the affairs of government. Fearing an invasion of the French, the populace were permitted to arm themselves. The societies of Orangemen (from William of Orange), among the Protestants, and Ribbon men among the Catholics, sprang up and prepared to combat each other. Then appeared Tone upon the scene, and succeeded in enlisting both Catholics and Protestants alike in opposition to the policy of England under Pitt, resulting in rebellion against England, which afterward sufficed as an occasion of strife among Catholics and Protestants. The shocking atrocities of 1798 culminating in the pretended protection of defenseless men, women and children of the Protestant faith, who, under pretense of shielding them from the Catholic mob, were inveigled into a stone barn at Scullabogue by the Catholic soldiery, and then the barn burned with all its inmates, a child thrown by its mother out from the flames was instantly pierced by the spear of a Roman Catholic soldier. This it was which aroused William Shepherd, then twenty years old, and his younger brother Peter, and sent them to the defense of their countrymen of like precious faith. They both joined the Orangemen and remained in that order till they emigrated to America.

Some time about 1810 or earlier, William married Elizabeth Fee who was born in 1790, and with her emigrated to America. Of his experience in the new world, stopping first with his sister, Nancy Dobbs in Pennsylvania, and afterward settling in Jefferson (now Carroll), County, Ohio, we know but little. But he, with his young wife was the first of the family to settle so far west, and all that may be known, and more of the pioneer hardships of Peter and John (which see) must have been experienced by him. He owned the first carriage seen in those parts. He lived and died not far from the village of Centreville, now the thriving town of Carrollton, Ohio, where his grandson, William Shepherd, now carries on an extensive mercantile business. He sleeps in the city cemetery there, having died in 1858, aged 80 years. His wife lies by his side, having succeeded him fourteen years later. They were Godly noble spirits, who braved all difficulties to found a home and a name worthy of imitation by their numerous descendants. Their children were Sarah, Thomas, John, James, Bridget (Biddy), Ellen, William, Elizabeth and Lucinda.

Sarah E. Shepherd, oldest daughter of William and wife was born near Carrollton, Ohio, December 25, 1813, married George Welsh in 1838 and with him and three little children moved to Lee County, Iowa in 1842, where they endured all the hardships of first settlers. Notwithstanding the privations of pioneer life, they were able to bring up a large family in the fear of the Lord, and in the spirit of energy and thrift. Their children were, William Shepherd Welsh, deceased; Margaret, Jane and Elizabeth Ann Welsh (twins); Edward Welsh, Sarah Ellen Welsh; Mary Lucinda Welsh (deceased); George Washington Welsh, and Martha Welsh, (deceased). Mr. Welsh died in 1883 and in 1894 Mrs. Welsh married David Porter, who died in 1898. From that time till her death in March, 1904 she lived with her son George. For most of her life, or until she was 85 years of age, she was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, but for the last five years of her life she was in the fellowship of the United Brethren church.

Of his experience for four years, a stranger in the new world, but little is known, neither of his long time on the ocean, required then by slow sailing vessels. In April 1812 he secured a government patent to 160 acres of land two miles west of Amsterdam, the farm now owned by Taylor Montgomery. This government title is signed by President Madison, and Sect. of State Monroe and is dated April 20, 1812. Shortly after this he sailed for Ireland at about the time his parents and brothers embarked for America. In 1814 he married in Ireland, Jane Shepherd, daughter of William Shepherd and sister of James, and with her returned to America, settling in Monroe county where he soon had extensive landed interests. A statement of account of that period reads as follows: "Woodsfield, November 26, 1816. Mr. Peter Shepherd bought of David Kirkbride, by his lady, three and one-fourth yards Cazsinett, 94 cents per yard, $3.05; two skeins silk, six cents, 12 cents; two yards muslin, twenty-two cents, 44 cents; 1 pound alum, 12 cents, total $3.74."

Wintenger, fifteen dollars, two and four tenths cents." This farm he sold to Robert McKeown, March 20th 1836 for $1400 and, in the deed, he spells his name for the first time with but one "h" (Sheperd). His wife spells it with two.

His naturalization papers were dated August 25th, 1828. He spent most of his life in Jefferson and Carroll Counties, he and his sons looking after the lands in Monroe, traveling these 75 miles over trackless hills. Of him General E. R. Eckley, recently deceased, said: "He was at one time wealthy, but lost much through litigation. He was strictly honest and expected everybody else to be so. He was of strong convictions and bulldog tenacity. His favorite saying was, 'Do you mind me?'"

Peter Shepherd's word never fell to the ground." He died in 1867 in his ninetieth year. His wife, Jane Shepherd, who sleeps in Amsterdam cemeery, died in 1848, aged almost 57 years. His life from childhood was one of hard toil, but he accumulated a competence, which by the panic of 1873 suffered great diminution. He was ruggedly honest, a devout Christian, an original thinker and a man whose memory is blessed. He sought, in spite of disadvantages incident to pioneer life, in his young manhood, an education, and was able to teach school for some time. The writer is the possessor of an old copy of Josephus, for which Milton Shepherd dug ditches 16 days at 50 cents per day. His widow, Margaret Shepherd still survives at Freeport, Ohio.

Her husband followed her in 1905, leaving their little daughter Mabel, born in November 1889, to the care of her aunt Mary. Right lovingly was this task performed, for Mary Griffin had known the sorrows of a motherless child, and her large sympathy, born of a large heart and a larger brain, if possible, was equal to the task, as the author well knows. The Griffins are Presbyterians and more than once has the pastor in Deersville, or West Lafayette, Ohio had occasion to counsel Mary, or "Maud" as she is familiarly called, almost to the exclusion of his session, for the church is upon her heart.

He was for a time a student in Adrian College, Mich. He taught school and farmed in Missouri from 1884 to 1892. After his marriage he engaged extensively in business in Missouri and at Bloomington, Ill. In 1907 he located at Ripley, Okla., where he is proprietor of large mercantile interests; his extensive store and equipment being valued at $40,000 above indebtedness. Having no children of their own, they are recognized as "Uncle Will and Mother," by all the young people of the town. Mr. and Mrs. Hastings are earnest Christians and continually seek to promote the interests of the Kingdom.

Ray is now stenographer for Senator Beauford at Ellington, Mo., and Roy is employed with his uncle Will at Ripley, Okla. Dr. Jordan died in 1904, leaving the boys but 13 years old. Six years later "Flo" again married, George Fenton of Columbia, a wretch unworthy of her, and with whom she could not live, and because she could not live with him, he followed her to the home of her sister and cruelly shot her to death. He was tried in 1912 and sent to the penitentiary for life. The sons, Ray and Roy are well equipped for capital and will engage in business together.

James Shepherd, third son of James and Sarah Shepherd, was born in Ireland about 1785, and died March 1st, 1865, in the 80th year of his age. He married Jane Anderson, and settled upon a farm of his own near Wellsville, Columbiana County, Ohio, but later sold out and removed to Knoxville, Jefferson County. They had no children. He, with his wife, Jane, sleep in the Somerset cemetery, and the shaft which marks their grave contains, besides their names, which are spelled Shepperd, and dates, this inscription:

“In peaceful slumbers we repose
Till God shall bid us rise;
When upward we will then ascend,
To meet Him in the skies.”

John Shepherd, fourth son of James and Sarah was born 1788, and, when his aged father and mother with Thomas, left Ireland for America in 1812, he was pressed into the service of England in the war then waging. His parents and Thomas came on without him. Later he joined them in their cabin home in America. After several years of hard work clearing land, digging mill races, etc., he met and married Margaret Montgomery, and with her settled upon 160 acres in the woods near the present town of Amsterdam. He had no horse with which to farm, so, leaving his young wife in the wild forest cabin, he spent the winter in Pennsylvania threshing grain with a flail for the tenth, and with the money so earned, purchased a horse. But the horse was stolen where he stopped at night on his way home and he was given a horse by his father-in-law. Wild game, and wild beasts abounded and many were the experiences and most exciting through which he and his young wife passed. Marketing at Steubenville twenty miles distant, husband and wife riding horse back, each with a sack with crocks of butter or lard in each end and with a dressed hog before them on the horse. This sturdy pioneer with his wife were devout Methodists, he a life long democrat. They prospered by frugal industry and integrity, rearing a large family and leaving to his heirs 508 acres of well improved land. He died in 1867, aged 79; she in 1873. They sleep in the Amsterdam cemetery.

Here, with his faithful wife, adhering to principle, faithful to his Lord and the Church of Christ (he was a Methodist), he helped to make Kansas the great and good state it is. Scourged by drouth and grasshoppers, borrowing fire from neighbors a mile distant, farming with ox teams, living in log cabins or sod houses, holding meetings in neighbors' homes, taking eggs to Atkinson, 50 miles distant, and selling them for 5 cents per dozen and buying calico for 25 cents, grating corn for meal, for the mill was two days distant, Andrew Shepherd repeated the pioneer struggles of his parents, only in another form, but triumphed over all.

Thomas Shepherd, youngest son of James and Sarah Shepherd, was born in Parish of Drumlane, County Cavan, Ireland, in 1793. He came to America with his aged parents in October, 1812, and settled on a farm in Ross Township, near to Mt. Zion church. While on the ocean a storm arose, and in order to lighten the ship there had to be much of the cargo thrown overboard, among which was a part of their household goods, including their family Bible with family records. Early pioneer life was very trying. The first house was built of green logs, laid on a stump foundation; their first furniture very rude. Their bedsteads were poles stuck in the wall, with tree boughs across for mattresses, over which was placed one of the two feather beds brought from Ireland. Chairs and tables were made of puncheons.

August 30th, 1816, the deed for the farm on which he lived was made out to Thomas, two years after his father's death, when James Madison was President of the United States, and was signed by the President. Later he built a hewed log house, and in 1831 built the brick house, of brick made in the yard. This house, repaired in 1892, is now, after 80 years, a splendid home, and is still occupied and owned by his children.

Thomas Shepherd had reason to be proud of his large family, giving evidence of a vigorous stock, and displaying in intellectual and business life, down to the youngest descendant, the qualities which bless humanity.

He was married to Lucinda Arbuckle March 25, 1823, who, like her husband, was of Irish parentage, and whose father was killed in the War of 1812. To them were born twelve children, all living until the youngest was over 40 years old. The eldest and the youngest were born November 12, just 26 years apart. The family were Presbyterians, members of the Bacon Ridge church. He and all but one son were Republicans. He died December 8, 1881, aged 89 years, his widow surviving him till April 1887. Husband and wife sleep in the beautiful Montgomery cemetery, near where their parents are buried. They had 12 children, 40 grandchildren, 63 great grandchildren and 15 great great grandchildren.

Thomas Shepherd took the oath of citizenship in open court and was naturalized October 26th, 1840, Judge H. Woodcook presiding. But he was and is a citizen of a better country.

Sarah Shepherd, oldest child of Thomas and Lucinda Shepherd, born November 12, 1824, was educated in the old fashioned log school house near her father's farm. In this school house, long ago displaced by the spirit of progress, the pupils sat on slab benches facing primitive desks arranged along the wall. She was married September 4, 1845, to George Crabb, and died March 19, 1901. To them were born five children as follows:

Henry A. Crabb, born February 20, 1847, married to Samantha A. Camper, September 25, 1873; to whom were

Mrs. Beebout, having attended Richmond College, and having taught before marriage, now assumed the double responsibility of providing for her little daughter, till God called the mother in 1895. Mary Beebout, after work in Wooster University, taught music in Steubenville schools, where she is now employed. She is a faithful Christian and church worker.

On June 11, 1850, he married Elizabeth Watt. They were the parents of ten children. After marriage he and his brother James settled upon a farm on "Timothy Ridge," but in 1854 they dissolved partnership, James going west and William remaining on the farm. On Saturday, July 25, 1863, John Morgan, with his 600 Kentucky rebel raiders, passed through this part of Jefferson County. William Shepherd, as Captain of the "Home Guards," went in hot pursuit. They camped on the east side of Big Yellow Creek, near Dr. Simpson's and Herdman Taylor's. Next morning, Sabbath, July 26, before daylight, they crossed the bridge and set fire to it. But they were captured by Shackelford at Salineville, William Shepherd assisting in removing the spurs and equipment from Morgan. In April, 1865, William sold his farm and went west with his family and goods via the Ohio River to Cairo, then up the Mississippi to Burlington, Ia., and from there to Ottumwa, where his brothers John and Thomas already resided. He bought a farm four miles north of Ottumwa, which is still in possession of the family. Before leaving home he had put a lock of his hair in an auger hole in the log grain house, which on returning he found nicely preserved. He was very fond of young people and children, and would rather give a child a doll to enjoy its pleasure than to eat his own dinner. He died January 11, 1890, in Austin, Nevada. She met a few children in a tiny school house, half "Dug out," half sod, with dirt floor and home-made benches and desks. Next she opened a new frame school house, the pride of the neighborhood, where she soon showed herself mistress of a gang of unruly, burly big boys. After graduation from college she taught English four years in the High Schools of Hiawatha, Kan., going from there to five years in the State Normal School at Lewiston, Idaho, and

In 1910 she was elected on the Republican ticket, State Superintendent of Public Instruction of Idaho, entering upon her duties January 1, 1911.
